i find i have been dozing
only a moment ago i had a dream and now awake to find the moment years.
upon a hill i wandered, through a looking-glass world,
eternal child to fancy, forever whimsy green.
there i sought the moon-shadowed path,
climbing slowly toward horizons,
my head prey to a thousand quick lights.
my glass heart in hand.
year by year, i survived the seasons,
growing rich on tears and laughter,
gathering bits of i and thee
and scattering them behind like seeds.
in my fourth willow spring, on a morning in may,
the path left its winding.
atop the hill, i sighed a sigh for my journey's end,
but who can return to the travelled road?
. . . except in dreams and perhaps not then.
glancing only once behind,
i stood and scraped my fingers on the sky
and shouted loud my name.
then, rubbing sand from my eyes to better see,
my dream drifted daylight too far.
and yet, before awaking,
i swear i seized a star.

patrice salzberg
this is my world:
something always going up, something always coming down.
it is a small world
and i know it well—
a table here a corner there,
a friendly face,
the local place.
(i know precisely what john said to mary last saturday night.)
my world is young, it moves and moves; but it is not a world of leisure, my days are filled with long silent hours, pensive hours . . .

i have come to learn.
learning is an experiment:

pick apart and leave the bones, dissect, inspect.

one
step
at
a

until, at last, i understand.

i see.
then, too, i have learned lessons not taught in the classroom.
my world has molded me into new shapes,
     and i will yield to the patterns of the future.
with new courage, I find I seek the stage,

wearing a thousand faces . . .
striking a stance, a pose,
a smile, a frown.
this is my time
to break the strings,
to play the part,
to take a chance—
to beat my drum and dance a dance.
(although, at times, it is wiser to conform.)
this is my world, full of contradictions, energy and dreams;
here I have learned, here I have changed.
no longer a child, I must leave in search of new worlds—
and yet, I will carry the gift of these years with me.
here I have found a new vision, inward . . .
... through the looking glass.

BY
CARROLL LEWIS

"The first week it was bubble gum, cigarettes, matches, lollipops, lifesavers, licorice and signatures 3 times a week."

"The fourth week we had a little scavenger hunt—1 pail of IC mud, 1 broken door, 1 clock on time, 1 chair lift for complex, 1 real sheriff’s badge, etc., etc."

"The fifth week we were tested to see if we really wanted to be in a sorority."
"The second week I learned the name, major, hometown, birth date, color of eyes, color of hair, color of teeth, religious preference, father's occupation, year of graduation, etc., etc., etc., of every single sister, etc., etc., etc."

"The third week: "I Alice Schwartz, as a pledge of Damma Getta Hi, do solemnly swear to always uphold the ideals of the sorority and to always conscientiously perform my duties as a good girl scout.""

"The sixth week, was, my friends, what is known among the neophytes as—HELL WEEK."

"CENSORED"
"but, it was really worth it!"
Of all the publications produced at Ithaca College, The Cayugan provides the most graphic summary of those subtle, annual changes which characterize the life of the institution. It is much more than a pictorial report. It is a source book for memories. Just as students preserve memories of their undergraduate years in their copies of The Cayugan, so does the institution preserve its memories of the past in a steadily expanding bookshelf of these annual publications. This bookshelf has become extremely valuable as the College starts planning for its 75th Anniversary. We go to the bookshelf for footnotes to our history, and for photos to illustrate the story of our beginnings and growth.

It may be that when the College reaches its 100th Year, the attire, classrooms and living accommodations shown on these pages will seem as outdated as those shown in The Cayugans of the 1930's and 1940's now do to us. Over the years, however, the files of The Cayugan portray one unchanging element—the spirit of the student body. It always has been—and remains—friendly, democratic and cooperative.

Perhaps that spirit has never had a more severe testing than during these transition years when the College has been moving from downtown to the new campus. As The Cayugans of recent years show, the spirit has not only held, but become more creative in the process. I commend and express my deep appreciation to the staff of The Cayugan for the effort and imagination which have gone into the production of this book—and to the students, whose individual and organizational activities have made possible this impressive photographic record, and the pleasant memories we will retain of the life of Ithaca College in 1966-67.

THE ONLY bank you'll ever need!
The retiring editors of the 1967 Cayugan would like to thank Mr. Tony Bruculere of American Yearbook for his time, energy and talent, Mr. and Mrs. C. Hadley Smith for their untiring efforts in helping us meet our deadlines, Carol Studios, Inc. for their exceptional job in taking the senior portraits, Mr. David Talbot, our advisor, for his help in getting this yearbook to the presses, and Miss Margaret Gibson for her patient cooperation.

The staff of the 1967 Cayugan has shown creative ability and imagination in producing this yearbook.
