Tchaikovsky's Program To Be Offered by Symphony Under Direction of Dean Williams

Orchestra To Be Augmented By Members of Band School During Rendition Of “Overture 1812” At Wednesday Night Concert; 140 Musicians To Be Heard After Months Of Practice

Shavings Saturday

The play Shavings, will be presented this Saturday evening, January 31, in the Little Theatre, the last of the January series. The success, it was thought, was sufficiently great to warrant a full vitation. The performances of the actors who essayed the parts that they played so that they will like to see again indeed, the success will win the approval of the students who attend the performances.

The customary student attendant will be made, and all are urged to get tickets at once.

No one who has not seen the production should do so.

Sebastian Ali

In Monologue Next Thursday

On Thursday, January 29, to 2:15 p.m., in the Little Theatre, the second monologue of the monologue series will take. Sebastian Ali will act, and the part he will assume will be seen in the following:

Mr. Drinker, in speaking in the play, is not that the historian of the dramatist. While I have famous histories, I have a story as the perfect possessor of the subject.

Landon Pleased

Large Crowd Last Tuesday

Mr. Landon gave a very enjoyable and amusing program on Tuesday evening, a program which merits the highest praise. His style was that of audience. The audience by its sympathy is the thing as all the students who attended were particularly pleased. The audience by its sympathy is the thing as all the students who attended were particularly pleased.

Moreover, Mr. Landon, in framing his presentation, has done so with a deep appreciation and that of the audience by its sympathy. His selection of characterizations has won the favor of the audience. Doris Watkins

Great Success In Milne Play

Miss Doris Watkins, in her senior monologue recital Thursday evening, January 31, the last of the monologue series, will act.

Mr. Watkins is a “Past Master” with a violin, having studied with Mr. Cesar Thomason and Archibald Brown.

Entertainment for this recital consisted of a dramatic presentation.

The crew of the last season was comprised of Franks, Mair, and Ralston.

The program offers a series of such variety and beauty.

WHO PROFITS MOST?

"For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? Mark VIII:36-37"

These are questions to which there is no answer. We realize that there are many things for which man may pay too dear a price. While it is a matter of common-place observation that nothing in life can be gained without some corresponding loss, some energy expended, something sacrificed, nevertheless, there is this principle of exchange in human effort, that the loss must be of less value than the gain.

There have been men and women who through distinguished service, obedient to the divine vision and the call of human need, have succeeded in making the world cheer and its souls have expanded and deepened and grown great through the years of their unselfish endeavor. There was DAVID LIVINGTON who gave his life to Africa, and gained a new home for all associated with his name. Many of his friends, leading their commonplace lives in conventional pursuits, and fearful of adventure, declared that he had thrown away his life. He had. He belonged to the group of those who, losing their lives, save them. The whole British nation and all the civilized world united to do him honor in his death. His body was brought thousands of miles from the heart of Africa by the hands of his devoted companions and he is buried in Westminster Abbey. On the black slab that marks his grave is the last words he wrote just before his death:

"All I can say in my solitude is, may heaven's rich blessing come down on every one. America, England, Turkey—who will help to heal this open sore of the world?"

Was it by chance that of the peoples whose help he invoked, LIVINGTON placed America first? Was it by chance of a prophetic intuition of the growing power and opportunity of America?

"Who profits most?" In a brief summary of this question it seems as if it all sums up in the phrase: He profits most, who serves the best.

HEALTH TALK IS FEATURING IN ASSEMBLY

After leading the assembly in singing the first and last stanzas of "America," Dean Hill introduced Miss Grosscup, national adviser in child health for the National Tuberculosis Association, who addressed the students on Thursday morning assembly on January 22.

Miss Grosscup opened her address by appealing to all prospective teachers to take an interest in the health of the pupils. "No one can get along without health," said Miss Grosscup. "Therefore, each of us, as teachers, must have an interest in health. Statistics show that the tuberculosis rate has been cut down in all but high school grades. It is our duty then to improve the health of children of high school age.

"Health education in the schools should not be thought of only from the standpoint of the school, for in health work we need the assistance of all the teachers in the school. Particularly is this true in the high school. Health education programs can be carried on with any project in the school curriculum."

"There is a school in Nassau county that has worked out a very comprehensive program of health education, in which they have two health councils—one for faculty and the other for students. The student health council is composed of eight members from each class. Each picks out some project to work on. It is the duty of these representatives to explain the projects being undertaken in their own rooms or to report the projects being carried on in other rooms to their classmates. Some of the projects included were Bird's expeditions and the quantification of the men chosen to accompany him. There were mostly spot maps on which they were marked on the things having to do with health."

"The faculty health council is composed of eighteen members who are asked by the principal to serve on the council. These members work in small committees that investigate the health conditions in the school, advise the teachers in their work in health, and causes of colds."

"If there is no health education program in the school in which you teach, you may be able to stimulate interest in such a program. Keep the health aim at the top and work in it with your particular students. Assume a healthy attitude toward their pupils. Student health work will be successful with the students. There is nothing wrong with the quiet, "teacher's pet" type of children, for healthy children are always wanted."

BAND STUDENTS FIRST RECITAL WELL RECEIVED

...was well played and was of the vintage type. A trombone solo, "Love's Enchantment" by Pyor, was then played by Julian Pettigrew. Mr. Pettigrew did the number in style and went to the first movement of the symphony. "The Three Sailors." Their work was excellent and refined and the performance left them in a position where no more could be preparatory.

Slocum Smith, Robert Allen, and Ned Mahony continued the program with Vincent Herbert's famous concert trio, "The Three Sailors." Their work was excellent and refined and the performance left them in a position where no more could be preparatory.

The last number on the program was the march from Act II of Bizet's "Carmen." It was conducted by Joseph Wells and made an opening to a most enjoyable recital.
