Saturday Morning, at the “Welcome to Parents,” President Howard I. Dillingham said that the idea for Parents' Weekend 1960 had originated amongst the Ithaca College students. Naturally, the college faculty and administration aided these students in presenting the first Parents' Weekend.

Any student who attended the weekend with their parents knows it was successful.

The registration and turnout was way above expectations. This shows parents are interested in the college the sons and daughters attend, and will attend a weekend of this type.

A special thanks should be extended to the three fraternities, Delta Sigma Phi, Pi Theta Phi, and Rho Mu Theta, who sponsored the weekend. Also, I.C. should thank the three co-ordinators of the weekend from the above fraternities, respectively: Tony Schimizzi, Steve Rose, and Bruce Yearly.

The enthusiasm of students, parents, and faculty concerning this weekend was great. Next year, everyone hopes that Parents' Weekend will again be held.

1960 Fall Semester Pledging

Has Begun at Ithaca College

Pledging periods for fraternities and sororities has begun at Ithaca College for the 1960 fall semester.

I.C. viewed last Spring's pledges, and it was shown that pledging can be constructive.

There are things around the school and the community that pledges can take part in to benefit the same, and serve as a credit to the college and the fraternity they are pledging.

Are you familiar with the large conference like table in the middle of our basement cafeteria? Or with the nine others that line along the painted walls?

All this is but a meager description of a medium size room that has wonderfully performed the role of a student union, and gives Ithaca College a bit of campus life.

Perhaps few people know of this snack bar being discussed. It’s institution that I.C. was greatly patronized by mostly the upperclassmen to grasp about lessons discuss fraternity activities, school games, plays, and the most important, to talk about life. But this upperclassmen monopoly is not so exclusive anymore. A great many younger faces of underclassmen are now as much a familiar hallmark of the snack bar as the seniors. Attracted by the coffee, coins, and song, they are to come any day of the week at any time.

Low celled and dimly lit our snack bar is a great “campus” thoroughfare. It’s a place that has been self-sustained for large classes for diverse reasons, a professor that is rushed with the coming president, an organization president who wants to hold a meeting and some staff all have recourse to it. Edors and riders, buyers and sellers as as numerous school organizations post signs on the already overcrowded bulletin boards with messages to the snack bar.

For one single hour in the day the snack bar is a spectacle to watch. From noon to one o'clock in the afternoon the snack bar is transformed into a sort of a market place or a fair where men come and go buying and selling and talking firmly as they try to "make" the one o'clock class.

For those students who will live to see the proposed student union at the South Hill Campus, they will remember that the union’s heritage is in the snack bar.

Glimpses of Last Year’s Grads

What happens to I.C. students after graduation?

Some of last year’s graduates have taken their places in jobs and some have gone on to grad school. It might be interesting to know the whereabouts and various occupations of some of last year’s seniors.

Greg Anderson, who was the President of the 1959-60 Student Council, is teaching at Pratt Institute in New York. Receiving a B.S. degree in Physical Education, Anderson is also teaching a public school and serves as an Intramural co-ordinator.

Sharon Taylor, who was also a physical education major, is teaching at King’s Perry outside of Ithaca. Miss Taylor is also taking graduate courses at Ithaca College this year.

Phyllis Gofran and Erie Shepherd who were recently married, are now teaching in Schenevus, New York.

Brian Mee recently signed a baseball contract with the Chicago Cubs. During the year, Mee was also teaching and working on graduation at Ithaca College.

Donald Bannister is serving in the Air Force.

James Moniess is taking “management training” at Kodak in Rochester, New York. A great many younger faces of underclassmen are now as much a familiar hallmark of the snack bar as the seniors. Attracted by the coffee, coins, and song, they are to come any day of the week at any time.
This is the introduction to the weekly music column which I hope you will be reading and enjoying in the weeks to come.

Writing a music column at a college or university holding as many diversified interests presents a unique problem.

Is it possible to write such a column in the interest of all the students, and not only for those studying music? I hope so.

It is assumed that a person seeking a liberal education must try to attain a fairly reasonable amount of understanding about the many varied elements that combine to form the world we live in.

Music is by all means one of these elements. It plays a very important role in our civilization, and yet how many of us know anything about it? How many of us know of the origin, composers, or instruments? How many times have non-music students heard conversations between music students about Bach, Beethoven, or their first love?

Music is by all means one of the liberally educated's problems. How many or us do wonder what the world is really like? How many of us have been whetted with references between esoteric and musical discrimination?

In this column I will try to do just what he claims it to be, “a way of simplifying the unnecessarily difficult problems,” in playing the conventional type clarinet.

During his demonstration he played many difficult passages from: Symphony #1 by Brahms; Symphony #3 by Sibelius and the Mozart Clarinet Concerto.

At the end of his lecture he said, “If your present clarinet is constantly getting out of order, I will give you a written guarantee that if you use my clarinet, it will also get out of order. It is not the clarinet but the clarinetist.”

Mazzoe, who has been playing the clarinet for 38 years, and teaching 37, said that he had been thinking of a new method of improving upon the instrument for most of this time.

The Mazzeo is now being made by Selma Clarinet Co., one of the biggest manufacturers of instruments in the world.

Full House Views Alling's Recital

John Alling's Junior Professional Recital of last Wednesday was viewed by a filled house at the Music Hall. The permission recital was viewed by this writer as an excellent performance and due credit should be given not only to John Alling but to all members of the group who worked so splendidly together.

John proved his versatility by playing almost every percussion instrument known.

Members of the group were: Richard Fazio, who accompanied on piano; Sandra Rosenblum, John Engstrom, Alloster Johnson, Henry Ketere.

Robert Mazzeo, Clarinetist, Gives Lecture

Last Thursday October 27, Rosario Mazzeo, Clarinetist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave a lecture and demonstration on the properties and use of the Mazzeo-clarinet.

This clarinet is one which he himself invented in order to relieve the clarinetist of some of the many problems involved in fingering and reaching certain notes and registers on the clarinet.

His clarinet has already been proven to be just what he claims it to be, “a way of simplifying the unnecessarily difficult problems,” in playing the conventional type clarinet.

During his demonstration he played many difficult passages from: Symphony #1 by Brahms, Symphony #3 by Sibelius and the Mozart Clarinet Concerto.

At the end of his lecture he said, “If your present clarinet is constantly getting out of order, I will give you a written guarantee that if you use my clarinet, it will also get out of order. It is not the clarinet but the clarinetist.”

Mazzoe, who has been playing the clarinet for 38 years, and teaching 37, said that he had been thinking of a new method of improving upon the instrument for most of this time.

Wointraub Twins Present Concert

At the Ithaca College Music Hall on Friday, November 11, 1960, at 8:15 p.m., Spiegel Chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota will present a musical concert featuring the WOINTRAUB TWINS, duo-pianists, from the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, New York.

The dark-haired, identical twins Joyce and Joanne Wointraub, Sigma Alpha Iota sisters, have made themselves famous in the music world by their many concert appearances both with symphony orchestras and in duo-piano recitals. Duo-piano playing is most difficult requiring split second accuracy and precise execution of an involved interpretational and technical nature as displayed in the original works of Rachmaninoff, Brahms, Schubert and Schumann.

In the coming issues I will try to explain the job of “skep­toning” music. One does not just learn music. One must acquire a taste for music and then learn to appreciate it.

In this column I will try to do three basic things: I. Try to de­velop in those students who have not already developed for themselves a taste for music. 2. Try to acquaint those who have already had their appetites whetted with the world of music; and 3. Try to let everyone know of the many happenings in the world of music.

In the coming issues I will try to explain some of the many esoteric terms used by musicians; I will try to show you the differences between the various types of music; I will try to explain the history of music at I.C. and the world; and I will have a series called “Profiles in Music,” con­cerning itself with the many out­standing men of music who are alumni of Ithaca College.

In this way I hope to make this column not only of interest to the professional musician at I.C., but to the liberally educated student who wishes to broaden his know­ledge of the world through music.

Thaler Speaks Tonight at 7 P.M.

Richard Thaler, the chairman of the Young Republicans Club of Tompkins County, will discuss student participation in politics this evening at 7 p.m. in the annex.

Thaler, who is a lawyer in Ithaca, will speak specifically about the role that pre-Republicans I.C. candidates can play in aiding the Tompkins County Republicans on election day.

Last Monday, October 31, Curt Pfaff, a history instructor at Ithaca High School, spoke to the members of the Young Republicans Club. He traced the foreign policy of the United States in relationship to each country or group of countries in the world.

Pfaff said that the foreign policy of the U.S. has remained the same for the last seven years. Since 1945 foreign policy in the U.S. has been made by both parties. In these years, the United States has succeeded in swinging more countries to its side than before this period. These countries who were to the left are now neutral and those who were neutral are now to the right. Pfaff feels that no country would ever begin a war against another country because it would be fighting the rest of the world, and history shows this can't be done.

All students interested in politics and government are invited to attend these meetings. Discussion periods will follow the speeches.

Delta Kappa Fraternity announces the completion of plans for the annual Christmas Ball to be held Saturday, December 10, from 9:30-1 p.m.

BOMBER BITS: . . . The 1960 Ithaca College basketball season is in a rousing success, possibly not record wise, as compared to the 6 wins and 1 loss of the 1958 season and diminishing success and scoring was quite subdued . . .

Cornell fired a small cannon after their touchdowns, much like the late tradition at Syracuse, but they weren't in danger of running out of powder Saturday, thanks to Bomber defense.

West Chester, who defeated the Bombers in the first game of the season, was defeated in 7 games. They rolled up 214 points, an average of 33 per game, to just 19 for their opponents. Bombers hold them to 19 to 18, and with a couple of breaks, West Chester might not be undefeated now.

I.C. score team lost a tough game to Colgate on Saturday. They led the undeated Red Raiders, 2-0, the half, but Colgate came back in the second half for the win, 4 to 2. The boys from Hamilton are a prime choice for the NCAA soccer regions. Cornell is also undefeated and under consideration.

WIBC and WIBC-TV feature weekly sports programs. Friday evenings Bob Kelly and Walt Micha host "Kickoff Corner" at 7:30. The Thursday evening game is "The Locker Room" which features telephone interviews with well-known coaches, predictions on the work in progress, top ten teams each week, and a feature "nameless" celebrity each game.

WIBC-TV offers "Lockeroom Outlook" on Thursday evenings at 9:00. Bill Coleman covers a weekly sports scene and has an area coach as a guest each week. In part two (40 minutes) he has Dick Lyon Mooreco, I.I.S. football coach, and "Sterk" Stanford, Cornell crew coach.

I'll wrap it up this week with a "big well done" to everyone from I.C. at the Cornell game, including our Bombers. It was a long wait, but we did it. Back in two weeks, Pete.

You're out of your mind, too, if you didn't drink Schaefer . . . because Schaefer gives you all the pleasure of the first beer ever through.

One week later, November 10, the primaries take place which will limit the nominees to not more than three and no less than two in number. November 17, elections will be held in the annex.

Thursday, December 1, the first official meeting of the Class of 1964 will be held to elect Student Council Representatives.
