Book Exchange to Aid Students

A collector’s book exchange has been organized by Joseph Ross, with its proceeds being donated to the library. The purpose of the exchange is to afford the students of Ethics College to have a means of selling and buying used books under of a regulated system.

In the last issue of The Ithaca Chronicle, the name was omitted from the list of seniors who were notified on December 1.

The Ithaca College annual basketball tournament was held on December 1st, and was sponsored by the College Basket Ball Club and the Student Council. The tournament included a total of 16 teams from various colleges throughout the region, and was held at Trenchard Coliseum in Ithaca.

The tournament was divided into two sections, with each team playing in one section. The winners of each section then faced off in the championship game. The tournament was a great success, with many spectators in attendance.

A most hearty, and sincere wish for a Merry Christmas and a New Year replete with prosperity and happiness, is extended by "The Ithacan" to the faculty and students of Ithaca College, as well as to those advertisers who have employed these pages to depict their various commodities. This greeting could hardly be complete without including the Norrin Printing Company, whose ever ready advice and assistance has added immeasurably in the publication of the paper.

PEACE ON EARTH, GOOD WILL TOWARD MEN

"Peace on earth, good will towards men," this theme, dominant in the spirit of the first Christmas, is one that has been lost sight of for long. It is a feeling which should exist day after day, month after month, year in and year out. This modern world seems to have forgotten the phase and its significance.

"Peace on earth,..." The great powers of the world are constantly convening in diplomatic halls for so-called peace conferences. All that comes out of these worldly conflict; the powers endeavor to tell each other their intentions and standing armies. Each nation refuses to make any effectual reduction, saying, meanwhile, that they are ready for the appointed reduction, saying, meanwhile, that they are ready for the immediate reduction. Meanwhile, however, is very often the idle excuse. It is seen by no one weight in deciding campus affairs.

The "outside boys", being more representative of every strata of collegiate society than any other group, are in a position to discuss and take a hand in more diversified affairs than the other organizations which tend to be "cliquey". These affairs can thus be of such a nature as to have a feeling of happiness and well-being it in—try it—you will be most pleasantly surprised.

NEED FELT FOR "COMMONS" ORGANIZATION

Although the "outside boys" of Ithaca College have never been formally organized, the need for this organization has been felt, more or less, for quite some time.

Practically every college and university has a "Com­mons", as it is frequently called, and very often the little organization is replete with illusionary insignificance. It is to be earnestly hoped that the future "Com­mons" of this school will be organized and its business conducted with all the sincerity which it merits. The officers which will be elected in the near future, should bear in mind the important of their duties in order that the group may function effectively.

Some individuals hold that since a "Commons" is a not a regular formal group it is radical or revolutionary, but as regards the principles upheld by the Greek philosophers. This is not the case. If it should, there must be the "Commons" can, and should, take pride in their group, and endeavor to make it as important a figure as any leading organization in campus affairs. The "outside boys", being more representative of every strata of collegiate society than any other group, are in a position to discuss and take a hand in more diversified affairs than the other organizations which tend to be "cliquey". These affairs can thus be of such a nature as to have a feeling of happiness and well-being it in—try it—you will be most pleasantly surprised.

CHRISTMAS COMMERCIALIZED; SIGNIFICANCE LOST

Christmas has come to be so over-commercialized that many business men look forward to that time of year as the period in which they reap their greatest profits.

The giving of gifts developed as a sort of mem­oirs to the wise men, or Magi, who offered gold, frankincense, and myrth to the Christ-child. From this has been developed the custom of giving to those whom we love, in keeping with the greatest birthday of all time. But people lose sight of this beautiful significance; the wise men, or Magi, which can be far beyond their means to make an impression on someone. The American business man has greatly profited from this customs.

Although we lavish many gifts on Christmas, let us not lose sight of the beautiful significance of the moment.

QUOTATABLE QUOTES

(From Associated Collegiate Press)

"Preserve that amateur spirit. Now that we all have our own special gifts, almost everything we have is for sale. You can dig yourself so deep into your vocation that you won't even know there is a world outside," Dr. Lloyd C. Douglas, renowned author of "The Magnificent Obsession" and other best sellers, advo­cates living in more than one view. Dr. James W. Reed, he knows you have selected a world outside."

"For the first time in human history the working­man has been given some leisure to read, study and develop a hobby. The machine has been an engine born a fairy godmother to the toiler and there is no fear that it will destroy a Frankenstein monster which will eventually destroy man, its creator." Dr. James W. Reed, editor of "The Commons" and "The Ithacan".

"I cannot bring myself to believe that the general education good for an Englishman in the 18th century is the best kind of education for young men and young women of the 20th century in New York City." Chancellor Harry Woodburne of New York University "digs" at the theory of the University of Chicago's President Hutchins that the curriculum and the individual student is the important factor in education today.

I'm just about to be a sailor, and I want a good smoke. I got Chesterfield's, and I tell you they make a sailor happy. I'm a Chesterfield man, and I like 'em. And now, Buddy, I can't pay a higher compliment than that.

Girl or cigarette . . . . when I tumble that means I'm for 'em. Chesterfield's my cigarette. And I'll tell all hands they've got a hearty good taste that makes a sailor happy. And listen, they're milder.

... for the good things a cigarette can give a sailor.

I'll sign up with Chesterfields.
