SCAMPERS Through The Wings On Opening Night

Tomorrow night the cast and crew of Scampers will let the wind take them as they fly out of the College Theatre after running their vocal muscles on the curtain call chorus. The dramatization among other Ithaca night spots, will be Scampers’ Dance in The Seneca Gym. The new students, and many more, will be expected to attend. The cast and crew will be invisible to the audience as they perform.

Many think that the show should continue on, especially now that the junior voices, actions and dialogue have been set. By tonight the show should prove to be a smooth production and an opening in Pitts- grey is keenly, but hopefully, anticipated by the associates of this unusual musical extravagance, a production that out-shines the cinema.

Wednesday Joe Spadaro got all his lines and Book Week leaped out at the audience with a laugh that surprised all concerned... it woke the stage manager up. The high-light opening night, as seen from the wings, was a pair of unshapely figures wrestling about the mat. The students, with their bare voices, were quite fine specimens of physical training in a slightly ad-libbed Health week. The author of the scene checked his program.

Below is a completely unre- heard (?) shot taken by Hank Omer of the colorful finale of Act I. This picture does not capture the surprise of said group when on opening night the specifications were decided and descended. Whoops!

Opening night featured three ex- ercises for which lyrics were already written. Now if this be treason make the most of it. John Tucker slammed the audience with all music...
As I. C. It

By Dick Kuss

Being a senior, I have been extremely interested in what happens when one graduates. Just what should one do? It is a frightening thought to realize; you have finished your education and now you will put to use one chance in life. Perhaps the world that once terrified, but rather a personal fear of proving your college career a valuable asset to your future livelihood.

In an attempt to relieve some of the anxiety that is so prevalent for those post graduation years. Mon of us will go to work. Some as instructors, musicians, radio men, business persons, or actors will make their mark. But then there are those who wish to remain in school: it is in this mind that I should like to discuss graduate work.

GRADUATE STUDIES

Ithaca College offers graduate study for the following degrees:

Master of Science in Physical Education or Music Education, Master of Music.

The Graduate School's director is Mr. Grimsnow. In his first year at IC his requirements range from thirty-two to thirty hours of study.

The value of the graduate certificate is in the fact that you may teach for only ten years with the certificate. Within that period you must achieve the advanced study. If not, no matter how successful you are as a teacher, you will not be able to teach.

It is the purpose of this publication to point out the importance of the LC. men elate to any degree.

It is very true that I.C. has its share of the occasional retardate and those inferiority complexes and call themselves "kids" don't know what is or should be done with them. Those who hesitate is lost. It's high hat and the least the proprietor can do is to see him.

The purpose of this issue is to inform the students of the LC to make their mark.

Most students don't know of the following men:

Delta Kappa, February 1st. Might be taken under the Graduate School, commercially speaking.

Delta Delta Pi, February 11th. Might be taken under the Graduate School, commercially speaking.

RADIO AT RANDOM

By Frank Stanley

The beginning of the second semester here at IC brought few changes in the personnel of the Radio Workshop. The biggest blow to the dramatic productions of the workshop was the loss of two leading ladies, Miss Lewis and Miss Lewis, both graduates with a BFA degree, and Helene took her cue from Cepid. Miss Lewis will be married sometime this Spring.

But the ingenuity of the surviving casts (Helen Ridenour has returned to the Radio Department to complete his college education. Dave spent the last six months as an assistant for WLEA in Lomita, N. Y. At present he is doing personal appearances. Planting time announcing at WELMA Elmhira, in addition to his duties as co-program director at WITJ). All we can say is that WLEA's loss is our gain.

Fred Hackett, newly elected station manager, has only one comment to make these days, "This is my set time for Radio while I say, Fred, since when do you abbreviate station manager, R.F.T.A."

Once a radio man always a radio man... Pete Papagealis is carrying his radio education over to the stage. He can be heard tonight and tomorrow night as a radio announcer in The Health Scene in Scampers. Jack Angell is recuperating from his first case of announcer's ulcers, which he received last Sunday night while broadcasting the Repertory Band Concert from Boyce Hall by Junior High School, Welcome. He's been keeping memberships open for Jack Hurst and Bill Malia who are expected to join within the next week.

One of the best LAND OF BELIEVE programs and not only because we were in it was Bob Bichoff's The Pied Piper of Hamlin which was presented in the Aurora Street School lecture hall Wednesday night, November 17. 7:30 p.m. The admission price was twenty-five cents.

Close to the heart of St. Peters' Donna, holy monuments, and religious shrines are featured in this weekly show. It should prove of great interest in the 1950 Holy Year.

Business Student to Have Career Conference in March

A Career Conference will be held in the Speaker Room and Saturday morning March 10 and 11. The conference is to aid students in establishing their career goals and to determine if additional preparation after graduation would be helpful.

N策划 students have been invited to participate in the conference. A rising sophomore, Richard W. Bickerton may give the keynote address. It is hoped that talks will be given by members of the Law, Accounting, Real Estate, Advertising and Business Administration departments.

Round table discussions will be held and arrangements for individual conferences will be arranged between students and consultants in Saturday morning.

This conference is primarily for students of the Business Depart- ment, but students from other depart- ments are welcome to attend.

Further announcements concerning the conference will be made.

On the Boards
