Philembrock Leads Bombers Over Brandeis; Diminutive Guard Scores 29, in 74-62 Win
by Jim Aversa

Sparked by the all-around ability of senior Phil Leibrock, the Ithaca College basketball Bombers rolled to an impressive 74-62 victory over Brandeis University at Barton Hall last Saturday night.

Leibrock, displaying talent that would make any opposing coach grimace, stole passes, grabbed rebounds, and was the key man in the IC offensive thrust as he walked off the floor with scoring honors for the evening with 29 points.

The first few minutes of the contest were nip and tuck as both lined up five men with consistent accuracy. Brandeis jumped to an 11 point lead midway through the first stanza via the efforts of BU forwards Berkman and Ballas who combined for 12 points.

The waning moments of the first half were only a slight indication of what was yet to come as IC returned after the break to further embarrass the visitors with a 13 point spurt that gave the home team its biggest lead of the evening.

Russin controls boards
Big Jim Russin, who scored nine points during the second half, also controlled the boards for IC as Coach Wood used variations of 3-2 man teams in what appeared to be a good practice session for the Bombers.

The Judges from Brandeis were never able to overcome the early deficit, but showed signs of life late in the contest as they cut the IC margin to five points. At this point, Leibrock, who enjoyed a perfect evening from the free throw lane (11-11), took over once again and forced the over anxious Brandeis defenders to foul him repeatedly as he quickly upped the IC spread to 10 points.

Approved in principle
President Dillingham said the loan is advanced in principle, as have the architects' plans.

The College's application went in late in the contest as they cut the IC margin to five points. Council Member Answers Editorial (Continued from page 2) exempt. To do so would be folly. It is indeed a shame that there is not a broader base of support from the student body to this body of determination of student opinion, the student council. It is a shame that more students do not attend student council meetings and that more students do not participate in the elections that place representatives in office on the council to represent their viewpoints. However, this situation does not alter the fact that the student council does exist and that its recommendations and opinions do influence, at least in part, the decisions that the administration makes pertaining to student life.

The members of the Ithaca College Student Council are acutely aware of the problem of their existence. The students, as the elected representatives of the students of the various classes and departments of the college, certainly the author of "The Administration Knows" is guilty of an apathy, although perhaps of a different nature, which weighs heavily on the student body as a whole. The author of the editorial has not taken the time to find out for himself how much the student governing body is aware of the problems that confront Ithaca College. By spreading the theory that "nobody cares and nobody knows enough to do anything about it anyway," the author has simply given up and resigned himself to the apathy, and has in fact, joined in looking forward to a situation where apathy would be the ultimate value because there would be no sense of anyone doing anything because none would know enough to do any good anyway.

At Ithaca College there has been a tradition of apathy and of a lack of communication between the governing body of the students (the Student Council), the students, the faculty, and the administration. However, the Ithaca College Student Council is now undertaking plans to break through this wall of apathy and this communication barrier. It is no working for a closer contact among the various branches of the college community so that there can be some basis of understanding of the different viewpoints of the parties concerned.

The very fact that there is at present these tentative plans for a closer working understanding between the students and the administration, and that these plans have been welcomed by the pre-eminent all wise, all powerful "homo-volens dictatorship" proves, to me at least and I hope to others, that no dictatorship, no matter whether it be benevolent or non-benevolent, need be the form of government to be revered above all others at Ithaca College.

...The administration of Ithaca College has assured the Student Council on numerous occasions through its representative at Student Council meetings that it is not only willing, but anxious, to hear student viewpoints on issues which concern the students of the college. It has assured the Council that it will thoroughly examine constructive criticisms as long as this criticism is presented in an orderly manner through the one body which it recognizes as the official spokesman of the student body, the Student Council. I think the day has finally arrived at Ithaca College when a more vigorous student voice, articulating intelligent, thoughtful criticism is not only needed, but wanted, by all parties concerned. I think that the author of "The Administration Knows" has fallen into the same trap in which so many of our contemporaries find themselves; namely wanting to fight something, but being unable to find a cause in which to champion their real.

Well, I hereby issue a challenge to all those lost souls who want to work for a more vigorous student government on the campus of Ithaca College to support their Student Council as it attempts to tackle the well worn problem of general apathy on this campus. Let me plead now that all those students at Ithaca College who want to be heard from, at least in private do it through assembled student council meetings and come to class meetings, and vote in elections. Let all those who gripe in private do it through assembled student representatives.

However, let me assure the author of "The Administration Knows," that as far as the present membership of the Student Council is concerned and, I certainly feel, as far as the present administration is concerned, the student council, no matter how large or how small the backing it may have, will continue to exist and will contain an agent of the expression of the student viewpoints to an administration which will not dictate, but decide, issues on the basis of information gathered from various sources, one of which is the Student Council.

Former I.C. Varsity Star Coaches Winning Teams

An Ithaca College sports star of two decades ago, who now coaches at Greenport, L.I., has turned out both Suffolk County (N.Y.) championship in 16 years.

The team coached by Dorrie Jackson, 1947 Ithaca graduate, wrapped up its championship crown through the assistance of two sons, 17-year-old Dorrie Jr., a senior halfback, and 14-year-old Gary, a reserve back. The Greenport gridiron have won 36 straight.

Varsity Footballer, Baseballer

Jackson came to Ithaca College in 1938 from Westerly, R.I., the same town that turned out Eddy Sawyer, manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, who graduated from Ithaca in 1935. At Ithaca Dorrie played three years of varsity football at halfback before going into military service. He also performed in freshman basketball; and fresh and varsity baseball which he ran in the outfield. His Ithaca football and baseball tutor, James A. (Bucky) Freeman, is still on the coaching staff.

Here's how the New York Times describes the situation in the football happy seaside village at the eastern end of Long Island. The Oystermen had a holiday in Gardiners Bay last Saturday. Hardly anybody bothered them. The potential fields of Greenport, L.I., were ignored. The fishing boats rocked calmly in the harbor.

Fifteen-hundred persons, half the population of Greenport, had gone to see the local high school football team win its sixth Suffolk County League A championship in ten years.

26 straight wins

They saw Dorrie Jackson coach the team to its twenty-sixth consecutive victory; Dorrie Jr, score his 181st point of the season. Gary Jackson skill a brother at halfback and Sherry Jackson 4 years old, try to lead the cheerleaders.

Mrs. Jackson sat in the stands, mentally charting plays and planning strategy for next year.

The rest of the little fishing town went wild. Since 1953, when the smallest Long Island high school to field a football team had six first unbeaten season, Greenport smashed the tide tables.

In the fall they sent their sons, tanned and hard from a summer on the boats or in the fields, back to school and to Dorrie Jackson. In his ten years as head coach, Jackson's teams have won 51 games, lost nine and tied one.

Low enrollment

Porty-six won out for the team this season, the largest turnout the school has ever had. The high school enrollment in Greenport is 235. More than half are girls.

The one irritation in the football bed, naturally enough, because a porty-six. Jackson had been criticized by other parents because Dorrie Jr, was always carrying the ball. When the 17-year-old son led Suffolk County in scoring this season, the parents howled over the surf and the criticism.

The stands emptied slowly, Mrs. Jackson and Sherry went home to prepare dinner and the rest of the family, to their farms, and down to the sea.

Their farms, and down to the sea.

Winning own victory

Coach Bredwell feels that the team is not as strong overall as in previous years, but that the boys have made good progress and were given a big morale boost by the victory over Syracuses.

1959 victory, a 56-5 upset in the first meet of the season, was the year, when the Blue won all but one of the matches in thoroughly convincing the visiting newcomers.

Coach Herb Bredwell was unable to forecast an outcome of the meet, but felt that the team would burn come out on top. Clarkson is coached by 1. C. graduate Jack Herb.

Ithaca lost to touring Winona State Teachers College of Minnesota on Sunday. Winona is also coached by an ex-coach, Bob Jones, which explains why Ithaca was leading on the Teahechic Eastern swing.

The Ithaca College freshman football squad, which ended its season with a 3-2 record, is expected to furnish some good material for the Ithaca varsity next fall.

The Bomber freshman coach, Vince Veneza, listed a number of gridders who he hopes will be useful to Coach Dick Lyon of the varsity.

They include: Bill Brooks, Niagara Falls and Lawrence Green, Athens, Pa., ends; Fred Klahn of Scotia, and Alza Anderson. Bemore, L.I., tackles. Also Dick Meeker of Albany, John Shatto of Vestal, Tom Conforto of Woburn, Mass., and Bill Delievel of Verona, N.J., guards. He Believed in Santa Claus!

Recently I read in the paper of the strange case of a college student who believed in Santa Claus. The college student, so the story goes, was a strange individual who publicly announced before the world, and before his fellow college students, that he was a unilaterally and undeniably believing that there was a real live Santa Claus.

Of course, as you can well imagine, this kind of nonsense circulated in public could only lead to trouble, and of course it had to be stopped before it went too far.

Well, the first group to take action was an organization of dedicated college students who determined to stamp out this irresponsible nonsense once and for all. They summoned the guilty student before them and asked him several questions, all sensible and clearly stated. He admitted knowing all the accounts, both in newspapers and in various scientific journals proving beyond a shadow of a doubt that there never had been and was not now any such person as Santa Claus. He answered that he had heard such accounts. "Well then," they asked him, "why do you persist in announcing to the world this silly and trouble-making notion that there is a real live Santa Claus, when you know very well that it has been proved by experts in the field that there never was and is not now a person such as you describe?" To this he replied quietly and with his head bowed ever so slightly, "I don't know why, but I still believe there is a real live Santa Claus and I want the world to know how I feel."

Naturally, you can imagine how much this infuriated the students. They were quite determined to make this foolish student completely ashamed of the whole situation. The Union of Students for the Protection of Respectability and Suppression of Nonsense and Rabble-Rousing on the Campus, as they named it, summoned the guilty student before them and asked him if he had read all the accounts, both in newspapers and in various scientific journals proving beyond a shadow of a doubt that there never had been and was not now any such person as Santa Claus. He admitted knowing all the accounts, both in newspapers and in various scientific journals proving beyond a shadow of a doubt that there never had been and was not now any such person as Santa Claus. He answered that he had heard such accounts. "Well then," they asked him, "why do you persist in announcing to the world this silly and trouble-making notion that there is a real live Santa Claus, when you know very well that it has been proved by experts in the field that there never was and is not now a person such as you describe?" To this he replied quietly and with his head bowed ever so slightly, "I don't know why, but I still believe there is a real live Santa Claus and I want the world to know how I feel."

He left his room and walked toward the center of town. It was late. All the streets were dark and there was a cold wind blowing. He thought, "Maybe I won't meet anybody, maybe there's nobody out at this time of night. Maybe I won't get the chance to tell anyone that there is a Santa Claus." As the student was about to turn the corner onto the main street of town, he heard something moving near where he was standing. He looked in the direction of the sound. He looked at the house on the corner. He looked up . . .

Well, the next day, as the story goes, the student was in jail. He had been arrested on that corner. In a kitchen, there was a family who was making his lonely rounds on Christmas Eve and happened to see this "crazy kid" shouting and pulling at the top of his lungs. He was shouting for somebody to come back, "to wait a minute." The cop tried to quiet the student down, but when he resisted the officer he was arrested on the spot.

The whole case, from all I may have to go to jail for a while. Naturally, the student that he attended is utterly and completely ashamed of the whole situation. The Union of Students for the Protection of Respectability and Suppression of Nonsense and Rabble-Rousing on the Campus decided to have an opportunity to study in eight European countries during the summer of 1960.

In a brochure now available in the Graduate Office one may become acquainted with several "Study Abroad" programs. One of these is titled, "An Analysis of Programs and Problems in Physical and Health Education, Recreation and Youth Movements in European Countries." Carries eight hours This special course carrying 8 graduate or undergraduate credits will be especially interesting to Ithaca College students. Credit toward the B.S. and M.S. degrees is allowed. The program, which will run from July 15 to Sept. 11, 1960, includes a tour of Europe. It is headed by Dr. Bernard E. (Jerry) Hughes, who is the Assistant Executive Secretary for the State Committee on Tuberculosis and Public Health and New York State Heart Assembly, Inc. Dr. Hughes has been director of the program for 8 years and his over-all experience in the field of health spans over a period of twenty-five years. He is the author of several books on health and safety, together with numerous articles on health. The program is part of the college's vast program "Study Abroad" under the supervision of the graduate studies director, Dr. William Crimshaw. Like the "Study Abroad" program for the music students, the physical and health education program will include a tour of seven to nine European countries.

To tour France Starting with England, through Belgium, Germany, Austria, Italy and France, a maximum educational and cultural experience is arranged for the students. In Florence, Italy, there will be a residence stay of two weeks study period at the University of Florence.
One Last Christmas

d by Daniel P. Hailey

Thanksgiving morning everyone was preparing for the Christmas season. Flotsam were being made, Santa Claus beards were being fixed and the vendors were setting up their wares for the day's festivities. In a makeshift dressing room in the auditorium adjoining the room where the children sat quietly waiting for their turn, Santa glanced around the corner before the balloon was under control.

The shrill of the whistle began the parade. He climbed up on the stage, which was hitched to a truck. There were other Santas in each of the high school auditoriums.

A week had gone by. People had come and gone. Children wanted to induce the people to buy. "Of course, we like to tax your money," said one of the store employees. "Of course, we like to tax your money."

It was about 4:30 p.m. when he put the paper down at a single glance. A smile broke across his face as he watched a boy chase a prickly blue balloon. He was five; he found that out that day.

As the boy left a few tears came to Coleman's eyes. He simply wanted a Wyatt Earp gun. He didn't know that he was the boy who would be the start of another Christmas.

Campus issued an official statement shortly after the incident, deploiring the whole thing. They also published a statistical table showing that the rate of arrests for disorderly conduct and rioting arrests increased for all college students in the United States during that year. They assured the townspeople and all other responsible people who came to help that nothing of this kind would ever happen again.

Ken Murray thanked him warmly and quietly said, "I don't know."
