NOTES AND NOTIONS

By Bob delany, '30

Monday, Jan. 16: To the office of C. Brown, agent, and so to his behest to see the director, Mr. Ellmore, where a hope of a future appearance in a state of rehersal was mentioned. At Mr. Ellmore did look for a shortness but that fateful phase. "Not the type." And so home keeping his play falls. And so to bed.

Tuesday, Jan. 17: And so to bed and so on the day and so of various items at Repertory Playhouse where one feels of happiness if not of the luck known as filthy.

Wednesday, Jan. 18: Up betimes and to view Whistler's Mother in person which is to say the original. Thence to see the ham director Louis Hallett. And so he do boot of his past thirty years. And so I did gently ask of his present plans. So he told me more of his past thirty years. So I left him. And now I have at last an audition in the radio at the N.B.C.C. establishment next Monday. And so to bed with the thought of Christmas ahead. January, years. And so early out of bed to read and putter about the room. And so a lunch of hot dog tickled with mustard. Thence to the office of Mr. Brown who did again present me a good morning. In his revival of the Clyde Fitch drama, "Janahan Hall", so I did without daring to hope too strenuously and to my room to read from "Ivanhoe" and to plan further its dramatization which is a secret. And so to bed.

Friday, Jan. 20: Up to and many agents. And there is very little casting that is not "inside" stuff. And so to my house where Raymond Brown — not the agent but the houseman — to my room to interview me of a job as stage manager for her newest venture. Thence to work at the Playhouse upon a scene from "Candida," and so to the apartment of the playwright, John Lynne, whose recent presentation of "Ivanhoe" drew fine criticisms and no audiences. So his wife served crackers and peanut butter. Nothing could please me more. And so home and to bed at a disgraceful hour.

Saturday, Jan. 21: In the afternoon to interview the famous dancer, Martha Graham. So she caused me to leap with joy by announcing of me a job as stage manager for her new presentation of special performances of six miracle dances-play to be given at the Theatre Guild early in February month. Then she informed me that she must retain verification from the financial manager before she could contract to see the director of the Province Theatre Guild. And so I did gently ask of her present plans. So he told me more of his past thirty years. So I left him with fair success. And so to bed at a disgraceful hour.

Sunday, Jan. 22: A day of reading and of putting my book and so to bed in my quiet room to read and putter about the room. And so a lunch of hot dog tickled with mustard. Thence to work at "Ivanhoe" and to memorizing. In the afternoon to Brooklyn to interview the famous Misses Band School where I saw many faces that some played me music of the stage at Ithaca College. So to see the director, Tsin Tagger. And so he told me he is in looking for money and I reeked, "Brother who isn't?" And so left. Thence to work at the Playhouse upon a scene from "Candide," and so to the apartment of the playwright, John Lynne, whose recent presentation of "Ivanhoe" drew fine criticisms and no audiences. So his wife served crackers and peanut butter. Nothing could please me more. And so home and to bed at a disgraceful hour.

Monday, Jan. 23: Early up and situally in reading and so at breakfast I spilled hot cereal upon my shoes and so to my room to change and to Fifth Avenue in a great hurry. And to the audition was postponed because of illness upon the part of the auditor. And who would wish an audition without an auditor? So I did devote upon the possibility of ending it all by driving from the Fifth window of the National Broadcasting Company. Then I did force a smile and so I did smile at the elevators and all the people upon the street and at my landlord. And so to my bed where I let loose in teas such as to escape of sight.

Tuesday, Jan. 24: Out of bed at an excellent hour to read a letter from the radio advertising firm of B. R. D. and O. And so to bed and I will have an audition with them upon the next Monday at four. And so I did shine with glue upon my shoes and say, "Whatcha," several times out loud.

Wednesday, Jan. 25: Early to see the director of the Province town Playhouse upon an impossible errand. Thence to the studio of Randall Hargreaves, baritone, for meats of all kinds. Special prices given to Fraternities.
