Jay W. Fay to Conduct College Symphony in Beethoven's Ninth, on Sunday Afternoon

Herefore Student Conductors Direct College Orchestras in Public Concerts

SYMPHONY IS DIFFICULT

Concert Concludes Beethoven's Symphonic Series

By Philip Long

The Ithaca College Symphony Orchestra in its third public appearance this year will present Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The concert will be played in the afternoon of Sunday, February 15th, in the College Auditorium.

The performance of this colonial leader marks the conclusion of the first series of the season (illustrating the dramatic development of music) in the auditorium. The instrumental organizations, the student conductors, and the students of Jay W. Fay have presented eight programs this season. The offering of the ninth and last, this Sunday, will complete the entire program of the season.

There seems to be a strange want to add one point to the 58 total for the Varsity. However, whether or not the Metropolitan Opera House has been operated for the past twenty years without any deficit and if it is not until after the last year or two that its resources have been bared to the public. During this long span of time, Mr. Gatti-Casazza has been general manager.

The Metropolitan Opera House will continue to save opera in New York City has been formed with Luciara Bori as chairman, Edward Johnson and Lawrence Tibbett are members of the committee, in addition to Mr. Gatti-Casazza. The committee will be composed of six members, all of whom are equally qualified to administer the Metropolitan Opera House.

Hammond Addresses Students in Chapel

Representative of W. Hampden Makes Address in Ithaca Church

By Lorraine Sheehan

Clayton Hammond, the personal representative of W. Hampden, former Ithaca College student, addressed the assembly by name. In the course of his remarks, Hammond mentioned "Robert Browning and his Relation to the Theater," and his lecture was announced that on February 16th at the First Church, Mr. Hammond will present "Cymbeline," a dramatization of Browning's epic poem, "The Ring and the Book."

Varsity Five Loses to Boston on Fous

Second Season of Game With Bostonians in Ithaca

By Morty Fonder

The long winning streak of Ithaca College basketball was halted yesterday at last broken by Boston University at Boston's Soldier Field. Last minute foul chalked up the contest that was ragged to the 165-19 decision.

St. Lawrence is back to the part of Miss Prinz, but to the unique and original head- woman was for Marion Francis. The three minor roles—Lawrence, the housemother, and Joff, the roses,—were the ever-desirable Misses Patricia Bocca, and Joseph Short.

In the purely farcical case, it was one of the many activities in Ithaca College's outstanding natural beauty spots.

Blue and Gold Wrestlers Lose to Ten Points at St. Lawrence at Canton Meet, Friday

By Morty Fonder

The Ithaca College team met St. Lawrence for the first time yesterday afternoon at Canton in a 19-9 decision.

The Ithaca team were unable to gain three points despite of a possible second place finish. At one time, they appeared to have gained time advantages for the meet, but the score was lost by the last minute, Miss Borkowski wasuir a natural forward, and Miss Borkowski repeated her service to the Ithaca cause at the beginning of the year, Miss Borkowski wasuir a natural forward, and Miss Borkowski repeated her service to the Ithaca cause at the beginning of the year.

Dr. Howard Grant, one of our old fraternity brothers, paid us a visit last week. He is working for his Master's Degree at Syracuse University, and is teaching at night, thus getting some real practical experience. But wishes, brother! Some of the fellows in the house traveled to various parts of New York to see him. They returned sooner or later with many strange tales.

Youth, in the natural course of events, gives little thought to the destiny of the old man who is to follow. This is probably one of the reasons why so many men, in the evening of their life, are dependent upon others.
