Guest Editorial

For some time now, the Southern Negro has been the victim of numerous unjust political manipulations. Hundreds have been jailed for attempting to afford themselves the basic freedoms granted by our Constitution. Many have initiated legislation in an effort to alleviate this situation; however, certain southern elements have seen fit to continue their unjust practices.

Here in Ithaca, students at Cornell University and citizens of Ithaca have the "Freedom Walk". Additional support is needed to provide for the persecuted with legal aid, bail, and scholarship funds.

With these things in mind, several Ithaca College Students have expressed an interest in helping with the "Freedom Walk". Tomorrow evening at 6:30, an organizational meeting will be held in Room 22 of the Annex. Your attendance and help is greatly needed.

Congratulations Gregg

Next time you are walking along Ithaca College's halls and see Gregg Aversa, extend him your hand of thanks and congratulations.

Gregg has been selected "Senior of the Year," 1959-60. Besides college accomplishments, Gregg is well-known around campus for his pleasing personality and his "I am to be with" attitude.

The editors of The ITHACAN would like to congratulate Gregg on being selected "Senior of the Year" and hope you will too.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

"This is to reply to the letter from "some disgruntled seniors" which appeared in the May 4 issue of The ITHACAN. First, let me point out that she (one of the disgruntled seniors) is in a definite minority. The general consensus of opinion seems to be that Spring Weekend, 1960, was one of the best at I.C. in recent years, not "disappointing" as she alleged, and her petty cotch to call it.

Steve Brown, weekend chairman and Jack Bredthall, junior class president, in my opinion, and in the opinion of others, deserve nothing but praise for a job extremely well done.

This year's Spring Weekend had in all over last year's; the activity, the general atmosphere, and the attendance were all much better than last year. This year's Spring Weekend was superlative. Chairman Carl Field and the other committee chairman all deserve "well-dones". And she (the disgruntled senior) must admit that fried chicken, with or without utensils, is better than the perennial hot dog, usually served at the Sunday picnic. It is a shame that a few jealous, co-weekend planners cannot or will not admit that someone else has done a better job than they.

Nina withheld upon request.

Dear Editor:

Spring Weekend 1960 was acclaimed by students in general, to have been the most successful weekend in the school's history. This year's junior class, especially, is to be congratulated. It is the junior class that plans the most important, being a milestone, with the presence of Larry Elgart at the Statler Hotel.

We completed the weekend well in hand. We hope that succeeding classes can match this record.

Full credit should go to the hard-working faculty of people that conducted the weekend events. True, the power was in the hands of a few, but only because of the complete lack of cooperation with the junior class in general. However, these few people came through with flying colors.

The pride of last year's Spring Weekend committee may have been crushed because of our tremendous success. But there should not be any bitter feelings. After all, the weekend's general makeup is supposed to improve yearly. This year's weekend definitely surpassed this goal.

It was said by some that there wasn't enough food at the picnic, Sunday. If those people had waited patiently for about 15 minutes, they would have received it.

We hope that next year's junior class will have their class cooperation and produce a weekend, even better.

Summing Up

Graduation time is here again. And, of course, means that it is time once again when those people who give speeches and tell columnists attempt, to sum up past experiences. I suppose that, next to the turn of the new year, graduation time is the time where more people do more evaluating of things past and things to come than any other.

Things are said about those who are about to leave school by those who stay. Things are said about those who stay by those who are about to leave. And things are said about both those who are about to leave and those who stay by those who are not involved in any of this going or staying. And I think it is often wise to remember that, really, most of the things which are said about all this going and staying, are not remembered by those who hear or read these remarks. But, this does not matter. These things need to be said; and it is good that they are said. 'That is as it should be.

So it is with these that I am thinking now at this time of graduation. And the only way that I can do this is to talk about the things that I remember about my own undergraduate life. So, let me now put down some of my impressions and some of my memories for posterity.

I think the things that I will remember most about my college experiences are the little things, I will remember a whole series of little unrelated incidents. For instance, I'll remember various long nights in the bars of Ithaca. I'll remember limping to the infirmary after I had sprained my ankle. I'll remember climbing Buffalo Street in the snow. I'll remember almost not making the climb up Buffalo Street unassisted. In the wee hours of the morning.

I'll remember the two big snow storms we had when I was a sophomore. I'll remember the time the former Ithaca editor's dog got drunk and climbed Buffalo Street in the snow. I'll remember climbing Buffalo Street in the rain. I'll remember the time that I was a sophomore and went to New York for a cup of coffee. I'll remember the Friday evening games at Jim's with live jazz. I'll remember the time I really got disgruntled with a teacher who I considered too opinionated. I'll remember the time I decided to stop trying to fight the television department. I'll remember sitting in the stands of old Percy Field on Friday nights with the cold and damp from the falls spreading over the stands. I'll remember the feeling of vague confusion and bewilderment that hit me when I found out that Ithaca High School was not Ithaca College. I'll remember little things like these. And I'll remember boys and girls who I knew and who I saw come and go. I'll remember them, and I'll remember the things

I did with them, and I'll think of it all once in a while. But, I'll also remember the college itself. I'll remember Ithaca College as I came to know it after I had been there for a while. I'll remember Ithaca College with kindly affection. I'll remember it as a kind of well intentioned, sprawling, sometimes bumbling, conglomeration of mass improvisations. I'll remember it as a place where compromise was the rule of thumb. There never seemed to be enough money, or time, or facilities to satisfy everybody. Nobody at Ithaca College was ever really the students couldn't get out of their departments to give the school a real spirit which it needed. I'll remember these contrasts as part and parcel of Ithaca College.

These are some of my memories of my life at Ithaca College. There are many more. And each one of us has our own memories. Some of mine are bad memories. But, I can say quite honestly, that most of mine are good. They are memories that, most probably, will fade with the years. But, as they do, they will become mellow and they will seem more pleasant. They are memories of four years of graduate college life which was the limitations of facilities but very, very seldom dull.

And I'll remember the impression that Ithaca College was a place of great contrasts. I'll remember that, in my limited experience with life, I had never seen a place where so many contrasting interests and value systems were placed side by side. I'll remember the self-confident, aloof, witty English professor who was the personification of naked intellect. I'll remember the descriptions given by physical education students of some of the courses they took and which they considered silly or worthless. I'll remember being frustrated myself and inwardly rebellious at the specialized courses which I took and hated, when I was in a "professional" department. I'll remember how little the various professional schools and the students in them had in common with each other. I'll remember the fact that the students couldn't get out of their departments to give the school a real spirit which it needed. I'll remember the thoroughly enervating faculty types. I'll remember these contrasts as part and parcel of Ithaca College.
