Jenny Stockdale

Jenny Stockdale is an Ithaca-based singer-songwriter whose music draws on elements of Americana, pop, jazz, and blues.

She moved to Ithaca in 2012, after spending nearly a decade writing and performing in Southern California. In February 2015, she collaborated with producer Chris Frank and several Upstate New York musicians--including School of Music faculty, alumni, and students--to create her first full-length album "Fingers Crossed." "Aftermath," the second track on the album, rounds out the sentiment of her initial move to California as a young adult, looking ahead and behind with equal parts hope and doubt. Ithaca composer Joshua Oxford created a custom arrangement of "Aftermath" for this evening's program, and Stockdale is incredibly humbled and grateful to have Sinfonietta perform this piece.
