"What Henry Saw..." - On the southern end, Henry Hudson sailed into what is now New York Harbor in search of the Northwest Passage. The view had to have been spectacular.

"Zap! View with a Twist" - The Tappan Zee Bridge just north of New York City is a unique bridge, very low to the water, and twists to or from the western shore.

"View That Changed Us" - On a sunny day in 2001, the Hudson River was the guide used by plane highjackers to reach the Twin Towers. The soprano saxophones are randomly playing the 9th and 11th above the recurring bass pattern.

"The View from East to West" - The George Clinton (Kingston-Rhinecliff) Bridge is a high, open bridge that allows drivers and passengers an uninterrupted view. Looking east to west, one can see the Catskill Mountains rolling for hundreds of miles.
