David Maslanka was born in New Bedford, Massachusetts. He studied composition at the Oberlin College Conservatory, the Mozarteum in Salzburg and Michigan State University and currently lives as a free lance composer in Missoula, Montana. His works for winds and percussion have become especially well known. Mother Earth Fanfare was inspired by the following quote from St. Francis of Assisi; Praised be You, my Lord, for our sister, Mother Earth, Who nourishes us and teaches us, bringing forth all kinds of fruits and colored flowers and herbs.

A story in the Gospel of Luke tells of the relationship (in life and in death) between a rich man Dives and a poor beggar named Lazarus. Ralph Vaughan Williams had a special affection for the folk melody “Dives and Lazarus,” (which is known in various forms throughout the British Isles), and he drew on it for several of his works including the Te Deum (1937) and English Folk Song Suite (1924). About this work he stated, “These variants are not exact replicas of traditional tunes, but rather reminiscences of various versions in my own collection and those of others.” The key word here is “reminiscences” for, apart from the initial statement, and the final variant, the remaining four variants are a series of workings of the melody in a not quite conventional variation form. The work was originally written for strings and harp but lends itself well to the sonorities of the wind band.

Christopher Tucker writes, “In composing Gabrieli’s Trumpet, I wanted to personalize the work with elements close to the dedicatee, Al Sturchio. Speaking to his friends and colleagues, I learned he was a proud Italian-American, played trumpet, loved jazz and as Executive Director of the Texas Bandmasters Association was driven to make the organization the best it could be. The six and a half minute work is jazz inspired laced with motives and musical figurations from Italian composer Giovanni Gabrieli’s Canzon Sonare No. 4. The musical flow is constant and consistent from one section to another. The second section features a trumpet solo, which can be described as ‘Gabrieli in an Italian villa eating spaghetti and meatballs taking in some jazz music.’”

Morton Gould’s monumental Symphony for Band was composed for the West Point Sesquicentennial Celebration and premiered by the West Point Academy Band in April, 1952 with the composer conducting. Richard Franko Goldman described the piece as “brilliant, ranking with the scores of Grainger as an outstanding example of original and imaginative treatment of band sonorities.” The first movement, Epitaphs, is both lyrical and dramatic recalling the bravery of soldiers past. The quiet melodic opening statement of the main theme leads directly into a broad and noble exposition of one of the motifs, becoming a passacaglia based on a martial theme first stated by the tuba. After a series of variations which grow in intensity, the opening lyricism, combined with the passacaglia motif and an allusion to “Taps” makes a quiet but dissonant closing to the first movement. The second movement, Marches, is a subtle paraphrase on marches and marching. The various tunes parade past in an array of embellishments and rhythmic variations. At one point, a simulation of a fife and drum corps recalls the instrumentation of the original West Point Band. The work ends in a virtuoso coda of martial fanfares and flourishes.

To Set the Darkness Echoing was commissioned by a consortium of schools in Cobb County, Georgia, in the Atlanta area. Dana Wilson writes, “Although this wonderful part of the country is known for its many attributes, my primary association with it is as a keystone of the Civil Rights Movement, in part because it was the home of Martin Luther King, Jr. One reason that Dr. King was so successful—and the Civil Rights Movement had such an impact—is that through nonviolent protest, he held a mirror up to ourselves, forcing us all to see how we—not others—were behaving. In this process, to use the words of poet Seamus Heaney, Dr. King ‘set the darkness echoing,’ and thus inspired profound change. It is a great lesson for all of us that in our personal and social lives, we need not be afraid to set the darkness echoing, for it is in this process that we truly learn about ourselves and come to terms with the truths in our lives.”
