Cajun Folk Songs

Cajun Folk Songs was commissioned by Cheryl Floyd, the director of the Murchison Middle School Band in Austin and was premiered on May 22, 1990. Cajuns are an ethnic group from South Louisiana and descendants of the Acadians, a group of French colonists who were forced out of their home in Nova Scotia by the British in the latter half of the 1700’s. Ticheli says of this work: “Although a rich Cajun folksong tradition exists, the music has become increasingly commercialized and Americanized throughout the twentieth century, obscuring its original simplicity and directness. In response to this trend, Alan and John Lomax traveled to South Louisiana in 1934 to collect and record numerous Cajun folksongs in the field for the Archive of Folk Music in the Library of Congress. By doing so they helped to preserve Cajun music in its original form as a pure and powerful expression of Louisiana French Society. ‘La Belle et le Capitaine’ and ‘Belle’ can both be heard in their original versions on the Lomax recordings. ‘La Belle et le Capitaine’ tells the story of a young girl who feigns death to avoid being seduced by a captain. …‘Belle’ is about a man who goes away to Texas only to receive word of his sweetheart’s illness, forcing him to return to Louisiana. Finding her unconscious upon his return, he pawns his horse to try to save her, to no avail.”

Sòlas Ané

Sòlas and Ané are two Gaelic words mean Joy (Sòlas) and Yesterday/Yesteryear (Ané). It was named for the absolute pleasure Margene Pappas had spending every day living the music with her students. This is what Margene enjoyed most. Margene is the epitome of the phrase “Winners aren’t in it for the race. They just love to run”. Turning on the band room lights every morning for 37 years was Margene Pappas’ passion. Sòlas Ané was premiered on May 28th, 2006. That day was declared “Margene Pappas Day” in Oswego and the concert featured her present band as well as an Oswego High School alumni band comprised of some of the top professional musicians and music professors in the world. Sadly, the title, Sòlas Ané, gained a deeper and most unfortunate meanings as, on half hour after her final concert, on the day named after her, Margene’s father passed away of pneumonia in Champaign, IL.

The Cave You Fear

Some people have an innate sense of adventure, who go-with-the-flow, who live life for the unexplored, and I couldn’t be more inspired by them. For a long time, I was the opposite. I used to prefer to stay at home, working on my computer because it was the safe and responsible thing to be doing, listening to the same albums on my iPod, ordering the same meal at the same, familiar restaurants. And while there’s nothing necessarily wrong with having a routine or knowing what you like, I eventually realized that my life was starting to have a certain predictability to it. It was a few years ago, while I was still living in the same state that I was born and raised in, that I had the most terrifying epiphany that I think I’ve ever had. I was becoming increasingly bored and incredibly boring. In film schools around the world, Joseph Campbell’s book The Hero With A Thousand Faces is required reading for filmmakers, screenwriters, and storytellers because Campbell has single-handedly identified what we refer to as “The Hero’s Journey” — the series of events and conflicts that arise along a character’s path as he or she fights their way to some ultimate goal. After studying Campbell, it’s easy to question where we are on our own paths. What is our own story? What are we fighting for? What does it mean to be a ‘hero’ and how can we be more ‘heroic’ ourselves? When we hear our own call-to-adventure, will we jump up, prepared, or will we ignore it, sit idly and take the easy way out because we would rather life be quiet and comfortable? According to Campbell, each of our adventures are already out there, waiting for us. That’s not the problem. For him, “the big question is whether you are going to be able to say a hearty ‘yes’ to your adventure.” So for the next four minutes, let’s take a chance, let’s venture into the dark unknown, let’s fight whatever monsters we find in there. And although we might not always prevail, at least we’ll have a story to tell by the end.

Alleluia! Laudamus Te

Alleluia! Laudamus Te is a canticle of praise without words; the concert band being treated largely both as a single massive choir and, at times, broken down into individual sections, each functioning as a separate sub-chori or semi-chori. The music is based on three main themes, the first being a massive chorale in the brass, the second a long flowing line in the horns and woodwinds, and the third a quasi-fanfare figure first heard in the trumpets and then spreading throughout the other sections of the band as it is developed. These three themes form an arch-like, five-part design: the first two themes followed by the rhythmical third theme, which builds to a broad re-statement of the second theme, and this brings the music back to the first theme, which is capped by a short coda of almost overwhelming power and sonority, to round off the work in joyous triumph.

-Program note by Alfred Reed

Symphonic Suite

Symphonic Suite consists of five movements related through the use of the principal theme. In each movement a new theme is also introduced and in the last movement several themes are developed simultaneously. The suite begins with an Intrada which suggests a solemn processional in fanfare style. The following movement, Chorale, is based on a melody in the first cornet which has more than a hint of the “blues” in it. March is based on a short fanfare-like motif heard at the beginning. Antique Dance features a modal melody in the flute with percussion accompaniment. Jubilee is the climatic movement of the suite. Marked allegro con brio, it is written in sonorous triadic harmony throughout. With a few contrasting sections, the movement is based primarily on a chordal-rhythmic motif. Symphonic Suite was the Ostwald Award-winning composition of the American Bandmasters Association in 1957.

Cajun Folk Songs II

Both Cajun Folk Songs II and Ticheli’s earlier composition for concert band, Cajun Folk Songs, are inspired by folk melodies whose precise origins are unknown. In Cajun Folk Songs II the folk melodies are more freely combined with original music. The introductory section of “Ballad” is a deeply personal moment of reflection – a brass choral based on original material. We next hear two different melodic settings of the same folksong, “Aux Natchitoches.” (Natchitoches is a town in northern Louisiana named after a tribe of Native Americans who once lived in that region). The outer sections of the second movement, “Country Dance,” are built mainly on original music that evokes the energetic feeling and style of a Cajun two-step, a form commonly used in the dance halls of southern Louisiana. Often, one can hear stylistic similarities to Scottish folk dances, and even the American Hoedown. The middle section of the movement uses the folk songs “Et ou c’est que tu es parti” and “Joe Ferail est un petit nègre.” Neither folksong is available on sound recordings, but they are notated with their Cajun texts in Irene Whitfield’s invaluable anthology, Louisiana French Folksongs.

"It is not sufficient that I succeed – all others must fail."
Temüjin Genghis (Chinggis) Khan

Khan

Khan is a programmatic work depicting Genghis Khan and his army on the move. The opening theme, “Warlord,” represents Genghis Khan, which is followed by the “Horseback” theme (comprised of A and B sections). These three musical representations are used throughout the piece, creating a musical “campaign” complete with a serene village scene just before its decimation. Most of the work is at a brisk tempo combined with energetic rhythms and driving percussion which continuously propel the music urgently forward. Extreme dynamic contrasts throughout the piece contribute to the emotional turbulence. Genghis Khan and his army ended the lives of thousands of people and his “Warlord” theme, with great force, ends this work. Genghis Khan was one of history’s most brutal, charismatic, and successful warlords. He was a strategic genius. With his highly disciplined and effective army, Khan conquered more territory than any other conqueror, creating an empire that continued to expand even after his death. It eventually became the largest contiguous empire in history. His non-military feats included the introduction of a writing system which is still used in Inner Mongolia today (Uighur script), an empire and society which stressed religious tolerance and the Mongol nation which would not exist today if not for his campaigns.
